Preamble

The environment protection act, 1986 defines environment as the sum of total of land, water, air, interrelationships among themselves and also the human beings and other living organisms. It includes both biotic and abiotic factor. Due to increase in industrialization and urbanization, natural resources of the environment are exploited endlessly. It is very necessary to generate awareness against the depletion of natural resources and environmental hazards. Rapid increase of economic growth and rampant use of new technologies have also degraded the biophysical environment. We have been part of the problem; we will also be part of the solution. Under the background of above scenario, department of zoology of Dr. Radhabai Govt. Navin Kanya College is organising a national seminar during 25 to 26 february 2020.
